DEDICATION

We, the Annual staff of '60, proudly dedicate this annual to our custodian, Mr. August Clay, who for the past twelve years has worked to make Snyder High School a better school. We only wish there were something even greater that we could do to express our heartfelt thanks to him.

ADMINISTRATION

SUPERINTENDENT'S MESSAGE

1959-60 has indeed been a memorable one for the Snyder School. Great improvements have been made in our educational opportunities.

We are very proud of our new Vocational Agriculture building and equipment for the boys of our High School. Our Home Arts Department is really nice and every girl in the Junior and Senior High are taking advantage of these courses.

Many other improvements have been made in our school. New tables, chairs and demonstration equipment for our science department has improved our science program.

We are also fortunate in having one of the best high school libraries in which to do our study and research. Our library is being improved each year by addition of new volumes of reference material and books.

All these add up to greater educational opportunities for each student in the Snyder School.

To our Senior Class and their sponsor, Mr. Skow, we extend our congratulations for the fine manner in which they have managed the production of the 1960 "Pioneer."

Sincerely yours,

O. W. Garnett

SENIOR CLASS PROPHECY

As we come to the end of our school career, we can't help but wonder what lies ahead. We realize we are stepping out into a big, almost frightening world, leaving our childhood and old familiar friends and teachers. What lies ahead for us? Fun? Adventure? Work? Sorrow? Let us dust off the old crystal ball and peer for a moment into this mysterious future.

The picture I see is a little hazy, but just a moment, its coming into focus. Now I can see it - there's a big crowd - people in evening dress, tuxedos, and mink coats. A hush falls over the crowd as a young man steps into the flood lights, raises his trombone to his lips, and fills the hall with a beautiful melody. The face of this famous entertainer is familiar, but I can't quite place it. Let me borrow a copy of the program of course I know him. It's the talented Donald McFall who graduated with the class of 1960!

As the last mellow note of the trombone solo folds away the picture changes. I hear the lowing of many cattle in the distance. The picture turns. I see a beautiful rambling ranch house, many buildings, row after row of ranch machinery and equipment; but now the picture has stopped moving. I see a tall thin young man dressed in western clothes and bronzed by the sun and wind. He's standing on a hill, gazing thoughtfully out over his vast expanse of green pasture, admiring his herd of black Angus. Who is this prosperous young rancher? It must be - it is - our old pal, Paul Wolever.

As I share the feeling of satisfaction and contentment with Paul, suddenly I am startled by a shadow fleeting across the picture. The ranch fades quickly away, and in its place we have only the trails of vapor left by a maneuvering twin jet plane. Again and again he almost disappears over the horizon, only to appear again. It's almost as if he is performing for me. He's writing something in the sky. He's spelling out in perfect letters, "Greetings, Larry Held."

The picture doesn't seem to be moving, but the vapor is settling to the ground. It's changing from white to grayish black. I see a billowing cloud of dust and smoke coming up from the middle of a race track. I hear screams as the crowd jumps to its feet in the bleachers - out of the cloud of dust and smoke they are dragging a man dressed in a racing jacket; goggles and helmet still on his head. A wheel of a racing car settles in the field across the fence after a final bounce. Is the man hurt? Who is he? The loud speaker blares the announcement out over the crowd, "Ladies and Gentlemen, Please keep your seats. Driver number 13 has been rescued from his racing car. He is Kenneth Skraback from Snyder, Colorado. After brief preliminary examination it looks as if Kenny has suffered only twisted shoulder. This boy is lucky to be alive!"

The crowd pushes forward, trying to get over to comfort the still dazed driver. A squad of motorcycle cops race up to hold back the surging crowd. The captain of the group shouts forth his orders, and arrests the movement of the crowd by the piercing blast from his whistle. I know that captain, it's Kenny Becker!

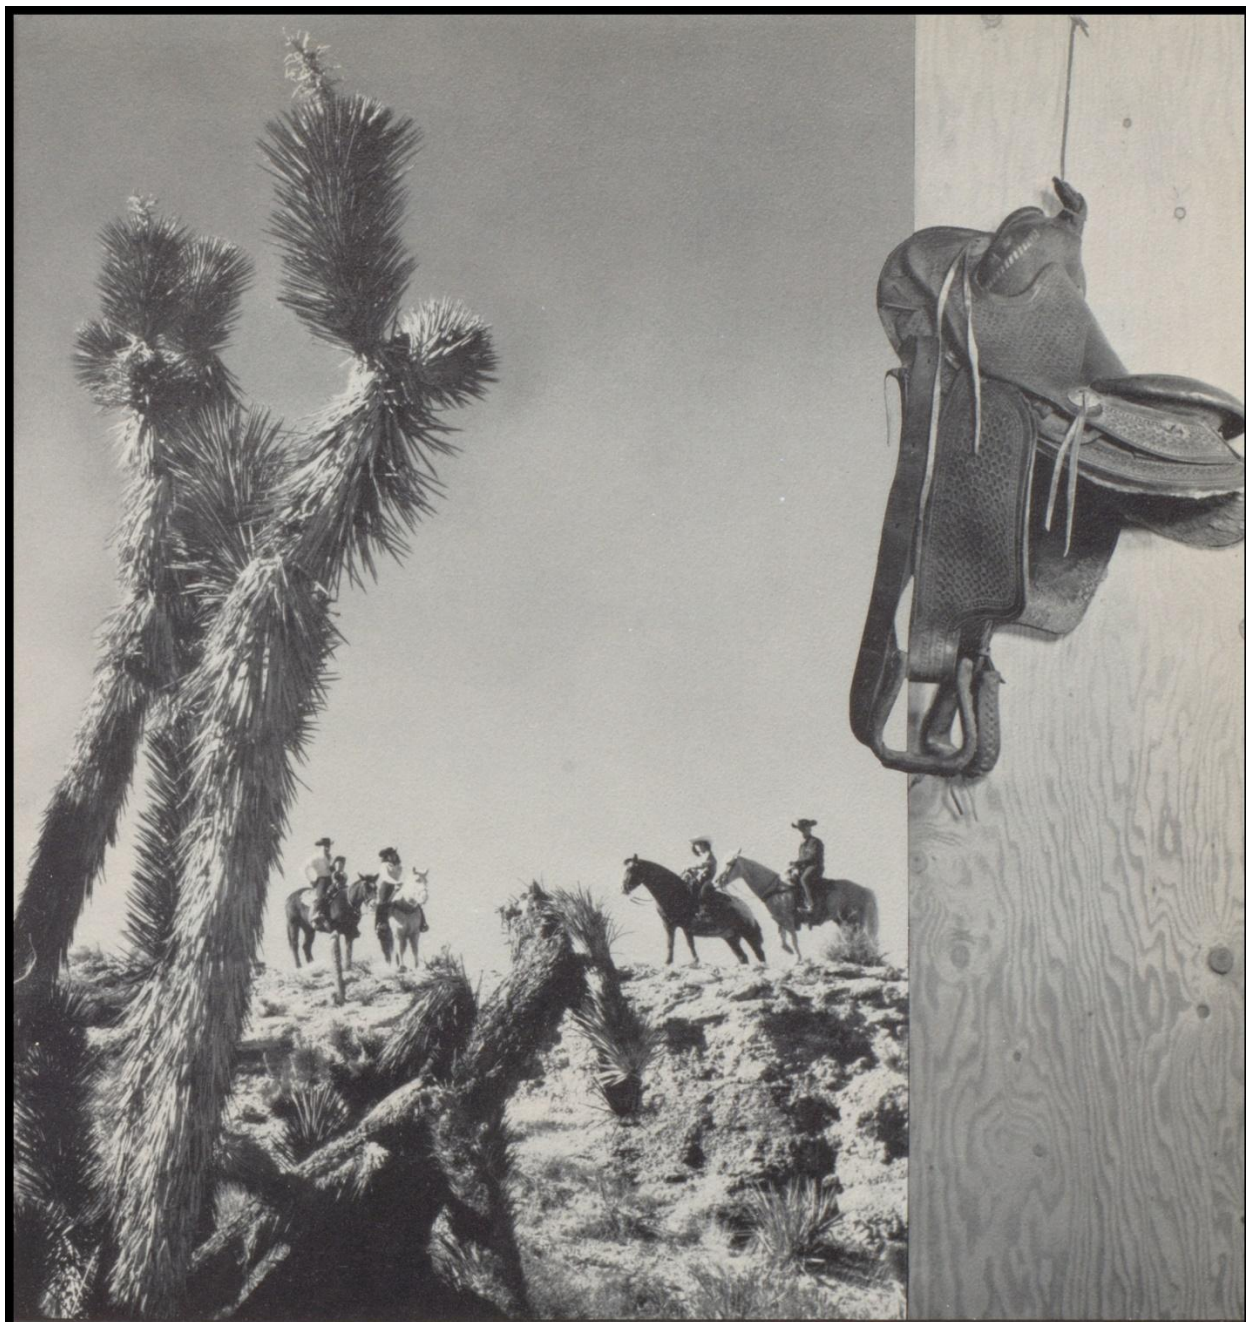

Suddenly the scene changes abruptly. A vast rippling desert stretches as far as I can see. There is a big black limousine gliding across the shimmering ribbon of a road. In the front seat are two important-looking men, apparently in the middle of a most serious discussion. In the back seat, under the brim of a sun helmet and behind a pair of dark glasses, I see a young girl busily jotting down notes on a short hand tablet. It is Linda Williams. She said she planned to go to business school, but who would have thought she would become a private secretary to the U. S. Ambassador to Saudi Arabia? I watch, the rippling sands turn to drifting snow. The gliding limousine stretches upward to become a blocky two-story dormitory. We move toward an upstairs window, and come to focus in a little 9 x 12 room. There at her desk in the corner sits Ella Mae Baughman, shivering in spite of the heat that can be seen radiating from her little coal heater. She is pouring intently over her Jamison-Faucet and Brown commentary on the Bible. A colorful jacket laid carelessly on the bed tells us that Ella Mae has realized her fondest dreams. She is a student at Prairie Bible Institute in Alberta, Canada. As I take in the scene, she turns and greets me softly. Even as I lean forward to answer, the picture begins to fade. We are moving toward a college campus. The pepper trees, the palms, the beautiful shrubs, and displays of roses and poinsettias tell me that this is California. Yes, I see the sign welcoming us to the Nazarene College in Pasadena. There is a familiar figure hurrying toward the library, loaded up to the chin with important looking books. I'd know that stride anyplace. It couldn't be anyone else than Ava Thompson, intent on the pursuit of higher learning. I watch until there's nothing left but the murky gloom inside a lifeless crystal ball. With a sigh I force myself back to the world of today, the year of our Lord, Nineteen hundred and sixty . . .

CLASS WILL

 Paul Wolever wills his ability to get along with the teachers to Jeff McCurdy.
 Kenny Becker wills all of his old history exams to Van Clay.
